FUND MANAGER'S COMMENTS

Global equities rose in April, as heightened trade tensions between the US and China began to dissipate, with both sides striking a more conciliatory tone by month-end. A historic peace treaty between North and South Korea also lifted sentiment. Geopolitical tensions in Syria capped market gains, while fears of the US pulling out from the Iran nuclear deal boosted oil prices.

Chinese growth remained stable, with first-quarter GDP increasing by an unchanged 6.8% on the back of a rebound in private investments. Business spending also boosted the US, which grew by 2.3%, although consumers pulled back following higher-than-normal spending in the previous period. Mixed Eurozone data stoked fears that the economic recovery was losing momentum.

In corporate news, first-quarter earnings were generally upbeat. Royal Dutch Shell was buoyed by higher oil prices and production. Linde's gas and engineering divisions exceeded expectations, helped by margin improvements due to higher gas prices, cost savings and volumes.

Samsung Electronics' robust numbers were boosted by strength in its memory division. Elsewhere, Roche's results were solid, on the back of good take-up of its new multiple sclerosis drug Ocrevus. Management also raised its 2018 sales outlook.

In April, we introduced a number of healthcare stocks, including Cochlear, a leading hearing implant business, and medical device-maker ResMed, to capture more of this specialised healthcare segment. We also initiated a position in Singapore-based Raffles Medical, a healthcare facility operator with a robust balance sheet that has good opportunities for growth in China, and Danish biotechnology firm Novozymes, which should benefit from structural drivers of demand for its enzyme products. Finally, we added to Raia Drogasil, a Brazilian pharmacy business with good opportunities for more store roll-outs. We added to Indocement on attractive valuations. Against this, we sold CVS Health, on concerns about the increased uncertainty and complexity arising from the Aetna deal, and because of its challenging operational environment. We also exited Engie, to fund better opportunities elsewhere.
